

11.00 Liang Yi Museum

In this cramped city, Liang Yi is a refuge, free of the throngs that crowd so many cultural sites. This is due to policies that are more rigorous than normal: visitors must call in advance to book a mandatory guided tour covered by the HK$200 entry fee, but the effort is worth it. The museum celebrates its location on the Hollywood Road antiques strip with a superb hoard of period Chinese furniture, mainly Ming and Qing Dynasty pieces from local tycoon Peter Fung's collection. The white-walled interiors ensure that the focus is on the craftwork, from the Imperial zitan screens (above) to the seats carved out of lustrous rosewood. Exhibits are arranged as they would have been placed in ancient homes, and many look untouched by the centuries. 181-199 Hollywood Road, T 2806 8280, www.liangyimuseum.com
